(NORTH BABYLON, NY... March 15, 2010) -- North Babylon School District resident and Suffolk Legislator Lou D'Amaro (D-North Babylon) recently joined local elected officials, parents, administrators and teachers at the North Babylon PTA Legislative Breakfast. The annual event helps foster good relationships between elected officials and the entire North

Babylon community, providing an opportunity to discuss issues of mutual interest and importance. Legislator D'Amaro updated residents on the County's efforts to further protect community members from violent sex predators, including a law he recently sponsored that prohibits offenders from residing within $\frac{1}{4}$ mile of their victims and pending legislation which will keep homeless sex predators housed in security-patrolled trailers on the grounds of the Suffolk County jail in Riverhead. He also provided an update on the progress of the sewer feasibility study for the North Babylon community and the increased police presence to fight crime and gangs. "I always look forward to attending the North Babylon legislative forum, held in the district where my own children are educated," said D'Amaro. "I applaud the North Babylon School District for hosting this wonderful event and thank all of the residents for coming out to keep us informed about important community issues."
