(HUNTINGTON STATION, NY... September 8, 2014) – There was “Unity in the Community” and a major show of spirit and pride as Suffolk Legislator Lou D’Amaro (D-Huntington Station) joined other local dignitaries at the parade to kick off the Fifth Annual Huntington Awareness Day on Saturday, September 6th in Huntington Station.

World Boxing Organization Light Welterweight Champion Chris Algieri, a Huntington resident, served as one of the parade’s grand marshals along with lifetime Huntington Station community leaders Thomas Jerideau and Anthony Mastroianni. Neighbors and visitors lined New York Avenue to show support for the community and then enjoyed the day-long festival at the Northwest LIRR commuter parking lot. This year’s event again included a pet parade.

“For five years, Huntington Awareness Day has given us an opportunity to showcase all that is great about Huntington Station and the surrounding community while providing a free, family-fun day for everyone,” said Legislator D’Amaro. “I applaud and thank the many wonderful volunteers, especially Co-Chairs Dolores Thompson and Keith Barrett of the Huntington Station Business Improvement District who once worked tirelessly for the past year to ensure that this special day would once again be a success.”
